BOOK SYNOPSIS

Full Length, Dark Comedy 3m., 2f. Various, Unit set Amanda, twenty-five, wants to be a great composer. But at the moment, shes living in New York City and writing advertising jingles to pay the rent while her fianc, Jack, pursues his singing career. So when Amandas mother, Kim, calls one evening from New Hampshire and asks for her help with something she cant discuss over the phone, Amanda is only too happy to leave New York. Once home, Kim reveals that shes leaving Amandas father and needs help packing. Amanda balks and ends up (gently) hitting the postman, who happens to be her first boyfriend. They spend the night together in an apple orchard, where Amanda tries to tell Billy how her life got sidetracked. It has something to do with being a young woman in a profession that only recognizes famous men. Billy acts like he might have the answer, but doesnt. Neither does Amandas mother. Or, for that matter, her father. A Feminine Ending is a gentle, bittersweet comedy about a girl who knows what she wants but not quite how to get it. Her parents are getting divorced, her fiance is almost famous, her first love reappears, and theres a lot of noise in her head but none of it is music. Until the end. Ending is a promising beginning...the playwright has a sense of humor that brings to mind a budding Wendy Wasserstein and a liberated sense of form that evokes a junior Paula Vogel.-Los Angeles Times Darkly comic. FEMININE ENDING has undeniable wit. -New York Post. Appealingly outlandish humor. -The New York Times. Courageous. The 90-minute piece swerves with nerve and naivete. Sarah Treem has a voice all her own. -Newsday.
